John Scheid has more than 25 years of trial and appellate experience representing clients primarily in the area of commercial litigation.

John represents publicly held companies, privately held companies, banking institutions and individuals in a variety of business-related matters. He has extensive experience advising both individual clients and in-house counsel on issues of risk management and litigation strategy. His practice covers many areas of substantive law including business torts, employment law, fiduciary duties, class action defense and commercial real estate litigation.

He has successfully prosecuted and defended numerous emergency petitions for injunctive relief, represented clients in the appellate courts and successfully conducted both bench and jury trials in state and federal court.

John began his career as a law clerk to the Honorable Charles R. Norgle, Sr., a United States District Court Judge for the Northern District of Illinois. John is a member of the Illinois State Bar, the Northern District of Illinois, and the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals. John serves as a board member for the International Foundation for Ethical Research, and recently was a board member for his children's grade school. He also frequently teaches as an adjunct professor for the John Marshall Law School in its Trial Advocacy program.

While at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, John received a B.A. degree in Philosophy and Economics in 1990. He received his J.D. from the John Marshall Law School cum laude in 1994 and was an editor for The John Marshall Law Review.
